"CONFESSION" IS DOUBTED

Youngstown Taking Steps
To Guard Girls

COLUMBUS, Oct. 11—(UP)—Ten-year-old Betty Jane Rush today was to attempt to identify a 21-year-old man who "admitted" he dragged her to the basement of a vacant house and assaulted her before she escaped.

Detective Sergeant Charles C. Cole who questioned the youth said he placed little credence in his confession. The suspect was arrested early yesterday after he broke into the office of Dr. A. E. Vaughn.

The child was kidnaped Saturday night as she walked home from a candy store with her 12-year-old brother. Her assailant clapped his hand over her mouth, she said, dragged her to the basement and attacked her. She escaped several hours later when he left the room momentarily.

Story Differs

Cole said the suspect's story differed with the girl's in several respects. At first he said he dragged the child to the basement, but later said she came willingly.

Cole said the suspect was the type who would admit anything he was accused of doing.

The man also said he took the child to the doctor's office, where he was caught. The child's story contradicted this.

A physician said Betty Jane's condition was not serious.

A Tragedy—For Parents

FOR years, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Birtich of Akron, Ohio, had planned to return to their home land—Yugoslavia—and live, when they had saved enough. Finally, the time came. Birtich sold his dry goods business in Akron, and the family came to Cleveland to bid farewell to friends there. A few nights before they were to go to New York to sail to Europe, their daughter, Dorothy, 17, disappeared. She had pleaded that she did not desire to go to a strange land to live. All her friends were in America. Now, the parents, prostrate, have canceled all their plans and have sent out a message through the newspapers to Dorothy, "Come home, the trip is off." They will rebuild their home in America.

NATION'S POTATO GROWERS TO FACE A.A.A.'S CONTROL IN WILLIAMSPORT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11—(UP)—A 1938 soil conservation program for potato growers was announced today by the Agricultural Adjustment administration.

Potato growers approved acreage stabilization provisions of the program in a nation-wide referendum, the A. A. A. announced. The vote was 25,193 votes for the program and 5,425 against.

A. A. A. officials said the program will be designed to hold potato acreage at a constant level. The national goal for 1938 is between 3,100,000 and 3,300,000 acres.

"As result of the referendum the potato program becomes an integral part of the 1938 agricultural conservation program," J. B. Hutson, assistant A. A. A. administrator, said.

The administrator, he said, is now at work apportioning the national potato goal between states, counties and individual farmers. Goals will be established for farms raising three or more acres for markets in the principal commercial areas. Goals will not be set for farms that raise potatoes primarily for home use.

5,400 SOLDIERS SAIL FOR LIBYA TO AID ITALIANS

ROME, Oct. 11—(UP)—Fifty-four hundred additional troops are to sail in two steamships for Libya from Naples today, it was said authoritatively, to strengthen the Italian garrison in North Africa.

LONDON, Oct. 11—(UP)—Belief hardened in London and Paris today that unless Britain and France stood together and took immediate measures to restore balance in the Spanish war, they would have to take much stronger action later.

Two developments showed clearly the anxiety France and Britain share as the result of Italy's refusal to discuss with them the withdrawal of foreign volunteers from the Spanish Civil war:

1. The French general staff was again reported in diplomatic quarters to have told Premier Camille Chautemps that it could not accept responsibility for the national defense if large scale foreign intervention in Spain, leading to a nationalist victory, were permitted.

2. The British government canvassed all engineering works inquiring as to the capabilities of all skilled and unskilled workers, it was learned, apparently with a view to putting them to making munitions.

Prosecutor Names Woman
As "Mass" Killer

CINCINNATI, Oct. 11—(UP)—Mrs. Anna Marie Hahn, 31-year-old blonde of German descent, who was charged with murder following a police investigation of what appeared to be a poison plot of vast proportion, went on trial in the courtroom of Judge Charles S. Bell today.

Mrs. Hahn, mother of a 12-year-old boy, was to be tried on charges of killing Jacob Wagner, 78, German gardener and bachelor who died mysteriously last June 3. She was also indicted on charges of killing George Gsellman, 67, a well-to-do German.

The police investigation two months ago revealed what Prosecuting Attorney Dudley M. Outcalt termed "one of the biggest mass murder cases in this country."

Seven Persons Dead

The investigation tended to show that seven elderly persons—all residents of Cincinnati's large colony of Teutonic peoples—died mysteriously. Authorities believed they were poisoned. A dozen deaths were studied, but the evidence of poisoning was not strong in all.

Mrs. Hahn, soft-spoken, intelligent and defying classification as a "criminal type," was the only suspect because of her association with several of the elderly persons who died. She denied the charges, saying that it was her nature to be kind to old people.

Out of a mass of circumstantial evidence, police tried to show that the murders were committed in order to gain the life savings of the victims.

Selection of a jury to hear Mrs. Hahn's trial was expected to require several days.

A venire of 75 prospective jurors was assembled in Judge Bell's courtroom to hear a brief statement of the case before selection of a jury was started.

JAPANESE BEGIN MAJOR OFFENSIVE IN NORTHERN AREA

TOKYO, Oct. 11—(UP)—Japan's powerful army in North China pressed forward on all fronts today in a determined effort to crush all Chinese resistance in north of the Yellow river.

Reports of steady progress caused observers in Tokyo to believe that the North China campaign is approaching an end and may be decided on the plains of Shansi province.

Taking advantage of the Chinese confusion following the fall of the well-fortified town of Shihchiangwang, 170 miles southwest of Peiping on the Peiping-Hankow railroad, the Japanese pressed further to the south toward the river.

At the same time a branch column pushed westward from two main columns operating on the Peiping-Hankow and Tientsin-Pukow railroads to Taiyuan, the capital of Shansi province and reportedly a Chinese stronghold.

Taking advantage of good weather which helped speed up troop movements, Japanese planes scouring the countryside as far south as the Yellow river reported that scores of thousands of Chinese were retreating to the south.

Reports of Hopi province and hurriedly constructing defense works at Shunte-Fu, 240 miles south of Peiping.

Girl's Eyes Hurt When Cars Crash

Jean Carter, 15, Removed To Hospital After High Street Wreck

Miss Jean Carter, 15, of Pontius Lane, was treated at Berger hospital, Saturday night, for eye injuries suffered when her spectacles were broken when the auto in which she was riding was involved in a collision on E. High street. She was discharged from the hospital after being treated by Dr. Lloyd Jones.

Miss Carter, police reported, was riding in an auto driven by Leslie Melvin, of Ashville Route 2. Georgia Carter was also a passenger in the car.

The auto driven by Melvin collided with a car driven by Jay McKenzie, Lancaster Route 3. Fred Lyons, Junior McKenzie and Violet McKenzie were passengers in the McKenzie car. They escaped injury.

Mother, Six Children Dies; Train Hits Auto

NEODESHA, Kan., Oct. 11—(UP)—A mother and six children, returning from Baptist church services Sunday, all were killed when a Missouri Pacific passenger train struck their automobile at a country road grade crossing.

They were Mrs. Julia Kebert, 37, and the children: Elouise, 16; Orville, 11; Ethel, 9; Mary Jane, 8; and Richard and Robert, 3-year-old twins.

The husband, Charles Kebert, and another son, Ralph, 15, had remained on the farm to do the morning chores.

Witnesses said an unidentified automobile passed the crossing ahead of Mrs. Kebert's car, churning up a cloud of dust from the dirt road. Vision at the crossing was not otherwise obscured.

The passenger train, en route from Kansas City to Hot Springs, Ark., was traveling about 60 miles an hour and rolled half a mile before it could be stopped.

ITALIAN EMBASSY PICKETS ROUTED IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11—(UP)—Police today dispersed a group of anti-Fascist demonstrators who sought to picket the Italian embassy in protest against the visit of Vittorio Mussolini, son of the Italian premier.

Charging the group of nine demonstrators immediately after they appeared before the embassy, police seized their placards, shoved them off the sidewalk and forced them to leave the vicinity.

The demonstration, coming during the height of rush-hour traffic as thousands of government employees were going to work, was designed to protest against young Mussolini's reported intention to visit President Roosevelt.

The demonstrators carried placards reading: "President Roosevelt, Don't Shake Hands With the Son of an Aggressor," and "Wanted for Collective Murder—Vittorio Mussolini." Other placards protested against alleged Italian intervention in the Spanish civil war.

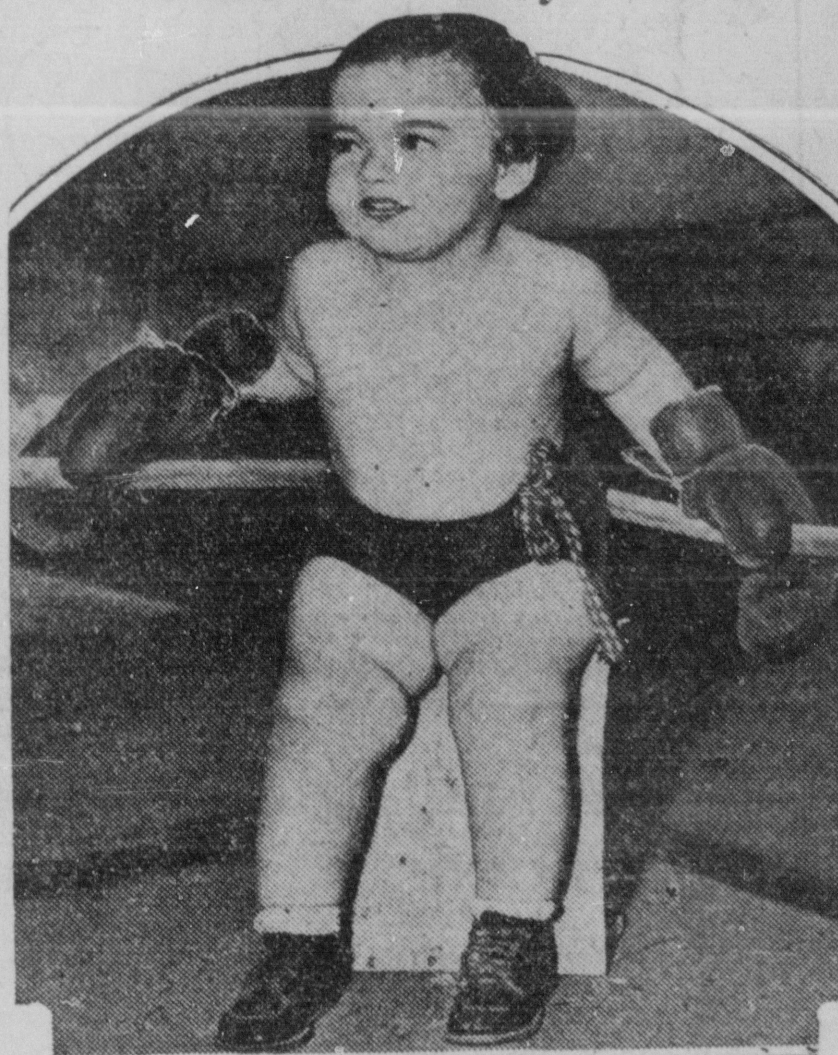

The embassy was not officially open when the demonstration began, although one or two secretaries who live outside the embassy arrived in time to watch police clear the sidewalks.

Young Mussolini and Ambassador Fulvio Suvich were inside the embassy, but did not appear.

Duke and Wally Greeted On Arrival in Germany

BERLIN, Oct. 11—(UP)—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor—the duke wearing a bright red carnation in his lapel—arrived today for a tour of inspection of Nazi Germany, with particular reference to industrial housing.

Some hundreds of persons, mostly women, cheered and chanted "Vindoor! Vindoor!" as the duke and his American born duchess arrived on their first formal visit since their marriage last June.

Germans had read little, in their official supervised newspapers, of the romance of the duke and duchess. But as the months passed, the story had reached everybody by means of gossip and there was some surprise at the small size of the crowd.

Dr. Robert Ley, Nazi labor front leader, with members of his staff and M. L. Cresswell, third secretary of the British embassy, greeted the duke and duchess on their arrival at Friedrichstrasse station from Paris. An army aide of Fuehrer Adolph Hitler also was in the welcoming party.

Both Appear Cheerful

Both the duke and duchess seemed cheerful and in good health. The duke wore a lounge suit and carried a derby hat in his hand. The duchess wore a dark blue woolen suit and a dark blue felt hat, velvet trimmed, with light blue jewelry, including a sapphire clip.

The "red" note sounded by the duke's carnation was emphasized when a woman pressed forward on the station platform and thrust a bunch of red roses into his hands.

It was a most quiet arrival, compared with those such as have greeted other international figures. There were none of the usual heavy cordons of storm troopers either at the station or the Kaiserhof hotel which is the duke's headquarters. It was Hitler's headquarters during the months before he came to power. Ordinary city policemen handled the good natured welcoming crowds. However, there were lots (Continued on Page Eight)

DEMPSEY'S WIFE RETURNS TO STAGE WITH ED WYNN

NEW YORK, Oct. 11—(UP)—Jack Dempsey hasn't said yes and he hasn't said no, but his lovely-to-look-at wife, the former Hannah Williams, announced today that she's planning to return to the stage.

No one knows how the former heavyweight boxing champion feels about it, because he denied himself to all interviewers. Mrs. Dempsey indicated that everything was all right, however, and that the children, Joan Hannah, 3, and Jacqueline, 14 months, wouldn't mind because they'll be with their favorite nursemaid.

The 27-year-old singer, who left Broadway in 1931 to marry Roger Wolfe Kahn, millionaire orchestra leader, will supply a big share of the sex appeal in Ed Wynn's new musical, "Hooray For What!"

Decisions May End Debate
Over Alabama Man

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11—(UP)—The supreme court today dismissed two challenges to the right of Associate Justice Hugo L. Black to sit on the high bench.

The action of the high court, announced as the tribunal sat for its first business session of the year, put an end for the present to any court action to bar Black from his place on the bench.

Although it was possible that at some later date a new challenge to Black might be advanced, the court's action today appeared to close the immediate legal phase of the fierce controversy which has raged about Black—a controversy which started with revelation in newspaper dispatches that the former Alabama senator once was a member of the Ku Klux Klan.

Hughes Reads Findings
Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, with Black present on the bench, announced the decision.

He first rejected the motion presented by Albert Levitt, resigned justice department employee. Levitt, he declared, had failed to establish — as required by law — a personal interest in the case. Then, without further explanation, the chief justice announced that the motion of Patrick Kelly, Boston attorney, seeking a hearing on Black's eligibility had been denied on the same grounds.

The court met at 12:01 p. m. Hughes announced the action on the Black challenges almost immediately to the crowded courtroom.

Speaking first of the Levitt motion, he said:

"The grounds of this motion are that the appointment of Mr. Justice Black by the president and the confirmation thereof by the senate of the United States were null and void by reason of his ineligibility under Article I, Section 6, Clause 2, of the Constitution of the United States, and because there was no vacancy for which the appointment could lawfully be made.

"The motion papers disclose no interest on the part of the petitioner other than that of a citizen and a member of the bar of this court. That is insufficient.

No Injury Involved

"It is an established principle that to entitle a private individual to invoke the judicial power to determine the validity of executive or legislative action he must show that he has sustained or is immediately in danger of sustaining a direct injury as the result of that action and it is not sufficient that he has merely a general interest common to all members of the public."

80 FLEE FLAMES AS HOTEL BURNS AT STEUBENVILLE

STEUBENVILLE, Oct. 11—(UP)—Many of them dressed only in their night clothes, more than 80 hotel guests fled today when fire destroyed the three upper floors of the Imperial Hotel, the oldest hotel in the city. Loss was estimated at $50,000.

Five men trapped on the sixth, the top floor, climbed down aerial ladders that were hoisted by firemen.

Mrs. William Becker, wife of the proprietor, discovered the blaze and instructed the hotel staff to awaken the guests. The hotel had six floors, the upper three of frame construction and the lower part of brick.

Abraham Lincoln, when president, once spoke from the balcony of the hotel while here visiting Secretary of War Edwin H. Stanton, a native of Steubenville.

"RADICALISM" HIT

CINCINNATI, Oct. 11—(UP)—The controversy over "Radicalism" in the church flared up again today as the Protestant Episcopal church convention entered its sixth day. Replying to a letter signed by Mervin K. Hart, financier and chairman of the Church Laymen's Association, charging that the Church League for Industrial Democracy was "radical" in its aims, the Rev. William B. Spofford, executive secretary of the league, said his organization had passed no radical resolutions yet but he hoped "it soon would."

PRESIDENT GOES ON AIR TUESDAY AT 9:30 O'CLOCK

Capital Hears Roosevelt May Discuss Need For Special Session

CROP CONTROL CITED

No Further Discussion of Japan Expected

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—(UP)—President Roosevelt prepared a "fireside chat" for tomorrow night to discuss observations made on his recent tour of the Northwest. While the country speculated over what "report" the president would make, demands for a special session of congress increased.

Although it was considered improbable that he would announce an extra session then, it was believed that he would cite needs for immediate crop control legislation and the enactment of his wages and hours bill.

The White House announcement of the address gave no indication of what the president's subject will be. But it was almost unanimously agreed that when he goes on the air at 9:30 p. m. tomorrow Mr. Roosevelt will tell the nation that he believes a special session is necessary to inaugurate crop control before the next planting season and to get an early start on the wages and hours bill which was stalemated in the house rules committee last summer.

Report of Journey The announcement merely said that the address would be in the nature of a report the president desired to make to the country following his recent visit to the Pacific coast.

Because of this it was believed that he would have nothing further to say at this time on the international situation. It was indicated that further discussion along the lines of his Chicago address, in which he condemned "aggressor nations" and suggested a "quarantine" of them, would have to wait definitive action by European powers.

Mr. Roosevelt leaves for Hyde Park, N. Y., after the address tomorrow night and it was believed that he would wait until arriving there before announcing the expected special session.

Ashville and Lockbourne Brotherhoods To Meet

By S. D. FRIDLEY Phone Ashville 79

Wednesday evening, the 13th, the Lutheran brotherhoods of Ashville and Lockbourne will hold their regular social, monthly meeting at the Ashville Lutheran church with banquet. The speaker for the evening will be Atty. Donald Little, who with his wife, recently located here. Cecil Noecker, in discussing the hybrid seed corn Saturday, said that this new variety was just the very kind for every farmer who raises corn. Even though the cost of the seed per acre, is slightly more than other kinds, the increased yield and its good behavior in growth, overbalances many times the small extra seed cost. He is now having some kiln dried at the Aiken dryer at Shadeville. Cecil, by the way, is a candidate for re-election for township trustee of Walnut township, for the two-year term.

Attending Funeral

A. B. and Mrs. Cooper were in Cleveland Friday, attending the funeral of Joseph Ongar who was general salesman for the Ashland Refining Co., of Ashland, Ky. He made frequent trips here, Mr. Cooper using this refining company's product. John Hudson is now assisting S. C. Allison in caring for the school building and grounds. There is much work to be done to keep everything "spick and span". And as long as Mr. Allison is in charge it will be just this way. Harry Wellington who has been all around handy-man about the Dr. Schiff new office building during its construction is "off on vacation" he says, and has several good jobs of corn husking waiting for him.

Attending School

Byron and Nolan Gulick are now attending school at Detroit, taking special work in Diesel engine construction. This school work and training will cover a period of about six months. Dr. J. L. Morton and his wife, the former Mary Frances Boone, are here from Cleveland, spending the week-end at the home of Mrs. Boone's parents, A. W. and Mrs. Boone near town. Miss Lillian Dennis, of Columbus, spent the week-end with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Val H. Prushing, of Scioto street. Homer Bausum, wife, son Wayne and Edward Bausum started this morning for Fleetwood, Pa., to attend the funeral of a sister of the last named. The distance is near 500 miles. Ralph M. Henkle, wife and little daughter drove over from Washington C. H. yesterday "to look the old town over again" he said. A few years ago he drove a bread wagon out of Washington and Ashville was in his territory, so he was here most every day. Remembered that on one trip, one of the drivers of the dozen competitors, had kicked a part of his bread which he had placed upon its accustomed rack, all over the grocery floor. No, he didn't fight, but went right on selling more bread. Remembered that "Fritz" Baum, the North Side grocer, sold a lot of his goods, especially the pies. Asked about "Fritz" and when told he was in Texas, wanted to know just where, so he could write him. So a postal card with Fritz's address will go to Mr. Henkle yet today. Mr. Henkle is now a "star route" mail carrier, but if their congressman over there has good luck it will be changed.

FARM NEWS

Brief Items of Interest to Pickaway Farmers

From the total national income of nearly 64 billion dollars in 1936, all farmers received a little more than 40.8 per cent as much as all manufacturers.

Southern authorities report that mechanical cotton pickers do successful work and are certain to become generally used when economic conditions are favorable.

Farm organizations in Tuscarawas county worked with the State Conservancy Council, and the Muskingum Conservancy District on plans to select and set aside wild life sanctuaries near some of the conservancy dams.

The national soil conservation service has advised restoring sods on at least one-half the land in 20 counties which had a total land area of more than 8,000,000 acres. These counties are located in southwestern states.

A crop of turkeys for 1937 is estimated as being nearly 10 per cent less than in 1936. Producers expect to market 8 per cent of the birds before November, 48 per cent in November, 37 per cent in December, and 7 per cent later.

An Ohio commercial concern which hired 16 former CCC boys along with other young men in 1936 reports that the group from the camps did a little better work and could handle tools to better advantage than those not trained in relief camps.

The estimated 1937 farm income of nine billion dollars is more than twice as large as the farm income in 1932. This year's receipts from the sale of farm products will exceed those of any year since 1929. Income from sales of corn are expected to be less from the 1937 crop than from the short crop of 1936.

C. I. O. LEADERS SCORN A. F. OF L., BEGIN 'COUNCIL'

Lewis and Aides Gather In Atlantic City To Map Program

FEDERATION RAPPEL

Labor Chief Silent on Boycott Of Goods

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 11.—(UP)—Leaders of the Committee for Industrial Organization opened their first "war council" today to set up a permanent, nation-wide labor organization in opposition to the American Federation of Labor.

John L. Lewis, chairman of the C. I. O., announced for the first time that he and his colleagues in the committee considered that their unions were "in no part or parcel" connected with the federation. His convocation of a meeting with the leaders of the C. I. O. unions, including the 10 suspended from the A. F. of L. a year ago for their C. I. O. affiliation, was timed to coincide with the final week of the A. F. of L. convention in Denver where the 10 unions are expected to be finally expelled.

Mere Play of Words

Any action taken by the A. F. of L., Lewis said, would be a "mere play of words." "Our attitude is one of complete indifference. We already understand that we have no association in fact with the A. F. of L."

Lewis' attitude was reflected also in the attitude of his subordinates of the committee. In the privacy of their executive councils this week, they will discuss plans for an early convention of the C. I. O. unions which now claim a total membership of 3,710,000—nearly 300,000 more than that claimed by the A. F. of L.—a convention that would establish the committee definitely and finally as the enemy of the federation.

Lewis was silent on agitation for a boycott on Japanese goods because of her war on China. "I'll have something to say about that later," Lewis said.

RODEO STAR DIES AFTER TRAMPLING BY HEAVY STEER

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—(UP)—Walter Cravens, of Butler, Okla., one of the country's best rodeo riders, died yesterday of injuries suffered in Madison Square Garden Saturday night when he was thrown and trampled by a 1,300-pound steer.

Thirteen thousand spectators saw Cravens fall beneath the hoofs of the wildly-bucking animal. The steer kicked him in the back, then circled and stamped him repeatedly. Rodeo attendants rescued the cowboy and took him to a hospital. Cravens suffered five fractured ribs, one of which punctured his right lung. He was kicked by a steer in an Oklahoma City rodeo two weeks ago, but was not injured seriously. Earlier this year he won the steer-riding contest at Amarillo, Tex., and was runner-up in the Madison Square Garden contest in 1935.

He is survived by a stepfather, his mother and five sisters, who own a ranch near Butler.

SKOLSKY'S NEWS SOURCES

Sidney Skolsky, radio's star reporter of Hollywood news, is the one-man news service for the "Skolsky from Hollywood" programs. His sources are first-hand, the stars themselves and the executives who control Hollywood's destinies.

Skolsky's tremendous personal following among these people and everyone in the studios down to the gatemen and office boys, all of whom are his friends, keeps his news "legit". Every item he uses in the broadcasts over the NBC blue network each Wednesday at 8:30 p. m. (EST) is double-checked for accuracy. Skolsky's office is in his home and he doesn't even employ a secretary for his one-man service.

"The motion picture industry is the most complex business in the world," he says. "What happens to the business, and the people in this business is of vital interest to the rest of the world. Lots of things are said about Hollywood and its people, but my first policy is to be impartial, to report everything honestly. This is my Hollywood, and I want to treat it fairly. That philosophy has helped me as much as anything to get the utmost cooperation from the people who make up the motion picture industry."

TWINS JOIN BIG SHOW

The Stroud Twins, Clarence and Claude, will join the regular cast of the Don Ameche program beginning Sunday, Oct. 17. These are the two young comedians who were introduced to radio by Rudy Vallee on his program several weeks ago.

They brought a new style of comedy to the microphone which got a big response throughout the country. Their delivery is quiet and the material suave in marked contrast to the usual radio comedy.

The Twins, whose friends can't tell them apart, are veterans of vaudeville and night clubs. They came from Texas originally and still retain a soft Southern speech.

Now they join Nelson Eddy, Edgar Bergen and Charlie (Dummy) McCarthy, Don Ameche, Dorothy Lamour and Robert Armstrong's orchestra as regular attractions of the Chase and Sanborn broadcasts over the NBC red network each Sunday at 8 p. m. (EST).

Series Puts End to Talk Of Terry's Master Mind

By HENRY McLEMORE

NEW YORK, Oct. 11—(UP)—Random thoughts on the late departed, but not lamented, world series:

This series put an end to the talk about Bill Terry being a master mind. . . . a master mind, as I get it, is a long-haired fellow who can think so brilliantly that he can take inferior material and "think" it to victory over superior material.

... brother Terry's strategy was about as brilliant as a Woolworth engagement ring. . . . he was a Midas in reverse. . . . everything he touched turned to dross. . . . the series just finished also gave quiet death to the accepted belief that National league pitching was superior to the flinging in the American league. . . . the only Giants' pitcher who belonged on the same diamond with the Yankees was Carl Hubbell, and don't forget that King Carl's victory scored when Yankees, in a burst of kindness, used gentlemen named Bump Hadley, Ivy Paul Andrews, and Kemp Wicker. . . . "Mountain Music" Melton, who set something of a record by winning 20 games his first year in the National, was drowned out by a Yankee "swing" band every time he trudged to the mound. . . . he was a ball of fire in the senior circuit, but just another fellow fellow with flannel pants to the Yanks. . . . Senior Tony Lazzeri probably will change his mind about retiring from baseball. . . . the senior, who was supposed to be washed up, hit in the neighborhood of 400 and played a second base that made young Whitehead seem as unimportant as a Phi Beta Kappa key two years after graduation. . . . another quiet death: the belief that National league champions outclass American league champions in fielding. . . . the Yanks, who bank on power, went through five games without an error. . . . their defense was as tight as a scotch drum. . . . the Giants, on the other hand, fielding strictly a La Minsky, making enough errors to cause Jawn McGraw to turn over in his grave. . . . the best ball player on the losing side was Jo-Jo Moore. . . . he started the series with a reputation as a great player, and came out of it with the reputation intact. . . . the umpires should be given a rising vote of thanks. . . . from the first pitch to the last one their decisions were well high perfect. . . .

Ruppert Gives Party

If you were at the Yankees' celebration party last year you understand why headache remedy stock jumped 227 points today. . . . Colonel Ruppert really raved back and threw himself a shindig. . . . if the owners are a little disappointed with the attendance they might listen to those observers who believe the business of making a $3.30 ticket seeker stand in line for his pastebord is fatal. . . . when a man wants to spend that much for a seat he shouldn't have to shuffle along a sidewalk in front of a box office for hours. . . . Joe Di Maggio was the best ball player on the field. . . . his batting average was up with the best despite the fact that not once during the series was he given a good ball to hit. . . . Terry rates the Frisco Italian as the greatest player he ever saw. . . . that is praise, indeed, when you remember that Memphis Bill has been around mirrors all his life. . . .

AGAINST ANARCHY
THE international co-operation in which the United States is now engaging is an effort to substitute law for growing anarchy and chaos. It means a choice between letting gangster-nations seize and destroy unrestrained and organizing the forces of civilization to restore order and respect for life and property. It is a movement of civilization against an upsurge of barbarism which, if allowed to run its evil course, might shove mankind into the Dark Ages.

No nation alone can stop this international outlawry, any more than one city or state can stop banditry in America. Nations of good-will and self-restraint have to act together, if there is to be any constructive action.

The League of Nations may prove to be a greater force in subduing international outlaws than Americans have expected. Our own co-operation naturally gives the League members courage. We do not want to join the League, but there is mutual advantage in the moral co-operation already begun.

The United States has its own practical and legal grounds for taking a stand against Japan's war on China, because Japan has obviously broken the Nine-power treaty signed by her at Washington in 1922, and the Kellogg-Briand peace pact which she signed in 1928, renouncing war as an instrument of national policy. Eight of those nine powers, including America, are interested in making Japan keep her pledge. Half a hundred powers, acting through the League, are interested in making her observe the Kellogg-Briand pact.

Spain offers a situation more complex, yet involving the same principles.

The face of America is resolutely set against war, and just as resolutely against outlawry. The problem now is to find a way to restore peace and order in Asia and Europe without our going to war. We shall soon see whether it can be done by moral and economic pressure.

Such pressure may check the present Japanese attack on China and may even shove Italy and Germany out of Spain. But such measures alone will not cure the basic trouble. For any lasting peace, these Fascist nations that are making the trouble must have better access to new territory and raw materials. The great land-owning powers must disgorge some of their World War loot. There must be a reasonable sharing of natural resources.

There are compensations in all things. The big income fellows, who have to pay higher income tax rates than the little fellows, can hire better lawyers to figure their deductions.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . Hour by Hour

PAGES from the Diary of an Antiquated Reporter:
Up to a lowering sky and on a day, too, when had planned an invasion of the hills with the Mack Noggles in quest of color photographs. No pictures on a day such as this. Broke fast leisurely, scanning the big papers and finding therein much to read if one has plenty of time. Then away to the plant where a full force was at work paying the way for the big annual Pumpkin Show Edition.

Out for a stroll over the paves, accompanied by the dog. So finding much news of dog-town at every corner, but of folk news there was little and few citizens astir. Even the week-end sight-seeing traffic was light, what with the drizzle and cold. Met Mack Noggle at the coffee club and, the picnic having been called off, he made a present of a bag of chocolate coffee cakes prepared by his lady, and as fine cake as have tasted in many the moon.

Occupied with affairs of business until past noon and then home for lunch and a session with the radio tuned in on the world series. Sorry that the Giants went down, for it seemed they were just beginning to hit their stride, if any. Not that I think they ever had a chance against murderers' row, but the series would have been more interesting.

Pondered over the football game lost Saturday by State, still entertaining the belief that Ohio should have won. That tilt provided more excitement than any on the air in recent seasons, probably more than any since that famous Notre Dame-Ohio State contest. Despite the West Coast score the scrivener believes that the Bucks have one of the best, if not the best, gridiron aggregations in the nation this year.

Remained at home in the late afternoon reading Seven League Boots, an old but interesting book of adventure, while the family found visual entertainment at the cinema. The author received the first authentic story of the murder of the Romanoffs, the tale coming from one of the three assassins. A gruesome confession from a dying man. And, for myself, did glory in his death. Such persons as that killer have no right to life.

Spent the evening before an open fire, pondering the state of personal and world affairs, finally arriving at the conclusion that the world's state is much more serious than that of the scrivener, for the world appears headed toward self destruction. I have given up all hope of determining what may be expected in Europe and Asia and have turned to a single fervent hope that the United States may remain outside the wars that seem so certain. Everyone else to the contrary, I can not believe that we have anything to gain by sticking our head in the lion's mouth unless we seek to prove bravery. And there is a difference between bravery and foolhardiness. No matter what we do, we can not take Europe's mind off war, so I prefer sitting back and letting them fight it out.

ROOSEVELT READY TO GO LIMIT

WASHINGTON—Before President Roosevelt delivered his Chicago speech proposing a "quarantine" against aggressor nations, he had some extremely significant conversations with the Navy and the State Department. The British also were in on part of the consultation.

If you know what transpired in these talks you can be sure that when Roosevelt threw out his "quarantine" idea he was not word-juggling. He really meant business.

Here is what happened before he made the speech:

Shortly after Congress adjourned, the President called in his chief Navy strategists and asked their advice regarding (1) the ability of the Navy to protect American shipping in the Far East; (2) the strength of the Navy in case of serious eventualities; (3) the strategy recommended by the Navy to block Japanese imperialism.

In reply, the Admirals unfolded a plan for an economic blockade of Japan. It did not call for war against Japan, though admittedly it might lead to war. It provided for action by the leading powers of Europe—possibly through the League of Nations or the signatories of the Nine-Power Treaty. Particularly it called for the cooperation of the British and American Navies.

The chief differences between the Admirals' plan and the economics sanctions hitherto tried by the League were twofold:

1. The League never had the cooperation of the British or French fleets in embargoing shipments to Italy during the Ethiopian crisis.

2. Italy, being on the European mainland, had adjacent neighbors such as Austria and Hungary which openly stated they would not adhere to the boycott. Japan, being a series of islands, can be blockaded.

Moreover, it can be blockaded by placing fleets at two strategic bases—Singapore and the Panama Canal. Virtually all shipments to Japan—except those from war-torn China—must pass via those two fortified bases. Therefore it was proposed that the British and American fleets cooperate at these two bases.

ROOSEVELT CAUTION

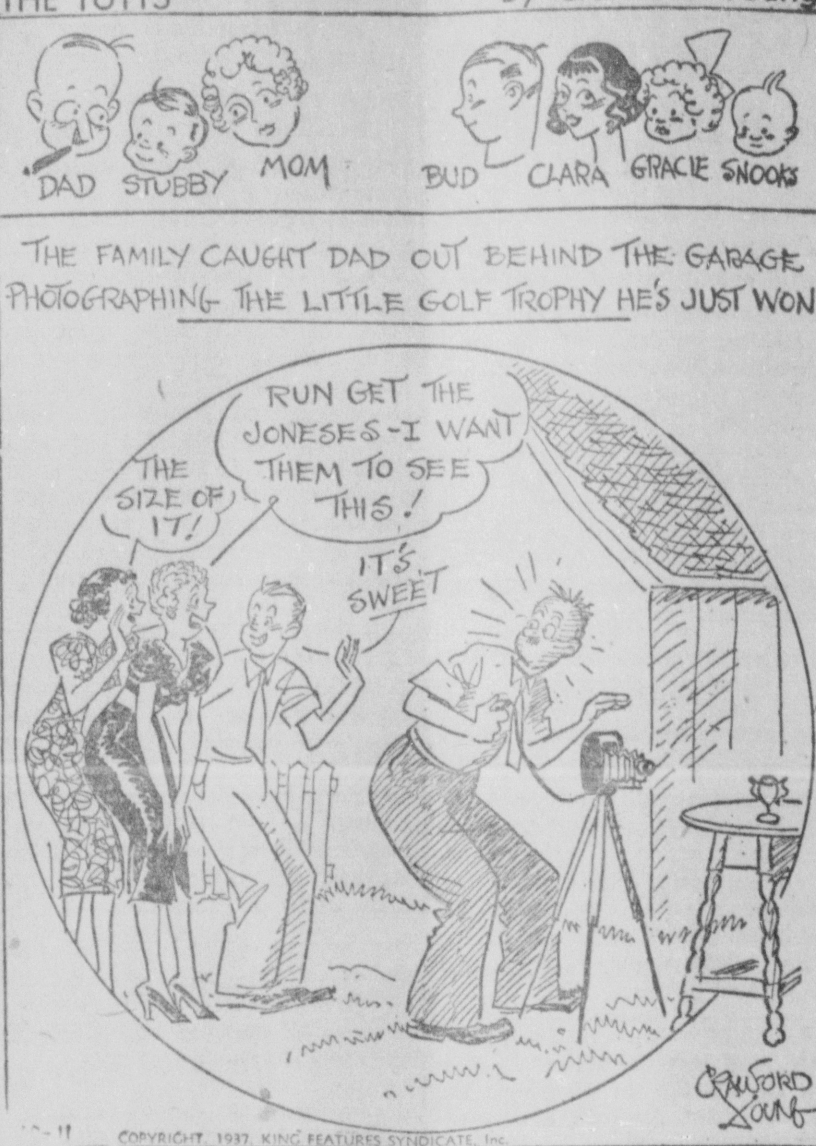

Secretary of State Hull, who was in on these conversations, approved the general idea—provided, of course, that other nations, particularly Great Britain, took equal initiative.

President Roosevelt was a little more skeptical. He felt that the American public was not prepared for such a step. Naval strategists reported that it would take about three months of blockading Japan to force abandonment of her war against China. But should Japan win the war and establish herself on the Chinese mainland, they said she would become invincible.

The President, who was virtually brought up on naval strategy (at 14 he was found reading Admiral Mahan, most profound of all naval strategists) agreed with this. But still he did not think the American people were ready for anything so drastic.

Action of Drugs Found Accidentally in Past

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
THE PRACTICE of mixing drugs to heal the ills of the human body and mind is as old as mankind. And they are still a part of the scheme of things. New drugs are constantly being discovered; new uses for old ones are being uncovered—some old ones are discarded.

Dr. Clendening

How the useful action of drugs was discovered in the past largely accidental. In modern times, with so much research in the pharmacological laboratories all over the world, it is more likely to be the result of deliberate research.

One of our drugs was a disease in past centuries. Ergot is a disease of plants which sometimes used to affect man. It is a rot, or rust, on rye and other grains, and it was known as a spoiler of flour. Before its effects were traced to the proper cause, people used to eat this spoiled grain or flour with terrible results. Epidemics of ergotism swept over Europe time and again in the Middle Ages. The drug causes a contraction of the blood vessels, especially in the extremities, and gangrene of a leg or arm was common. As late as 1816 an epidemic of ergotism swept Germany.

This very property of contracting blood vessels, however, was what put ergot into the list of useful drugs. Because it was found that it contracted the blood vessels of the uterus, so that it could be used to control hemorrhage after childbirth. In 1774, Parmentier, a Parisian apothecary, published a letter from a Madame Dupile of Chaumont, stating that she had frequently used a thimbleful of ergot to hasten childbirth, and in 1807, Dr. John Straus of Waterford, N. Y., recommended it for the same purpose. It is no longer used in that way, but it does stop troublesome bleeding by the mother after the baby is delivered.

Test Drug on Rooster

In order to test the action of ergot, they used the comb of a rooster. The ergot contracts the blood vessels in the rooster, the same as in man, and causes the edge of the comb to dry up, just as the toes of the ergot victims of the Middle Ages dried up.

In 1905, Sollmann and Brown showed that ergot had an antagognistic action to another great drug, adrenalin. Both drugs affect the vegetative nervous system which controls such things as the heart beat, the dilation or contraction of blood vessels, intestinal movements, etc. Ergot in one form or another has been found useful in treating surgical shock, and in migraine or sick headache.

Another drug which has a long history in medicine is belladonna. It was once called mandragora, and was used to produce sleep, even as an anesthetic before surgical operations. "The Scots," says an old chronicle, "mixed a quantity of the juice of these berries with the drink which, by their truce, they were to supply to the Danes, which so intoxicated them that the Scots killed the greater part of them while they were asleep."

It was used in old times as a love philtre, and called belladonna because it makes a woman's eyes so beautiful and sparkling. Perhaps the name came from the fact that under its influence one called up such alluring visions.

Today its use in medicine is largely in eye work in the form of atropine.

DEAD RECKONING
By BRUCE HAMILTON
COPYRIGHT BY BRUCE HAMILTON; RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Tim Kennedy graduated into homicide from the school of armchair murderers. With a lucrative dental practice and an enviable social position in a small town near London, Tim, at middle age, feels happy as a prince. His father is run down by a truck, returning home a week later a physical wreck, with all her former beauty shattered. Tim loses all interest in his wife and falls madly in love with Alma Shepherd, a widow. Finally he decides that Esther must die. The next scene is the coroner's inquest. Kennedy and his all-around man Adams have testified how Esther met her death by a "fall" from her bedroom window in the middle of the night.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 24

THE CORONER arranged his papers following Adams' testimony, hesitated a moment, and then recalled Dr. Harold Arkwright.

"I understand you were a relative of the deceased?"

"She was my niece."

"You were always her medical adviser?"

"Yes, since she was a child."

"Will you tell me what you know about this propensity to nightmares?"

"She used to suffer very badly from them as a child," Arkwright gave an account of Esther's early weakness, mentioning the shock which had caused it. "As she grew older the trouble seemed to leave her, as it does with most nervous children. After the accident it began to recur, and as she got stronger the nightmares seemed to get more violent."

"Were these bad dreams directly related to the accident?"

"In the sense that their return was caused by the accident, undoubtedly. But the dreams do not invariably consist of a direct recollection or recurrence of the accident. I tried to extract as many details as possible from my niece. Her remembrance was often vague and shadowy, but I came to the conclusion that the common characteristics of all of the dreams was a fear of a heavy object falling or coming upon her. The object varied; sometimes it was a tree or a telegraph pole, sometimes a motor car or a lift or a railway train. Sometimes she was unaware of the nature of the object. And in every case she did not know from what direction the danger threatened—she knew she had to run to avoid it, but had no idea where she should run. That would account for the frenzied panic and blind purposelessness of her movements when under the influence of these dreams."

"What treatment did you adopt?"

"I prescribed sedatives. But they seemed to lose their effect on her with abnormal rapidity. I also tried a little simple hypnotic treatment and tried to make her practice self-hypnosis, particularly before going to bed."

"Do you mean what is commonly called 'auto-suggestion'?"

"Yes. What I did on that line was not exactly in a professional capacity. It was more as a relation and friend. I am not an authority on nervous diseases, and as it appeared that Mrs. Kennedy was not improving in this respect, I suggested a consultation with a specialist. As Mr. Kennedy told you, we had actually arranged an appointment."

"Would you agree with Mr. Kennedy's suggestion that these nightmares were caused by taking heavy meals shortly before retiring?"

"I should say that was the occasion rather than the cause. Or, to put it in another way, the imperfect assimilation of food was the nearer, but not the fundamental cause. The fundamental cause was lasting mental shock caused by the accident, which revived a tendency that had been latent since childhood."

"But if the deceased had eaten lightly in the evening, would the nightmares have occurred?"

"That is impossible to say definitely. Probably they would have been less frequent and less severe if there had been no digestive disturbance. The whole digestive apparatus is linked up very closely with the nervous system. I advised my niece to avoid rich food in the evening as far as possible."

"I see. Tell me, Dr. Arkwright, have you any opinion, either from professional or personal observation, as to whether or not the deceased had any suicidal tendencies?"

"I am convinced she had not. Her attitude toward suicide was always one of incomprehension. She loved life; there was not a streak of defeatism in her temperament."

"You are satisfied that she did not throw herself from this window in a moment of aberration?"

"Absolutely. The supposition is quite incredible to me."

"Have you had any other experience of cases of nightmare in which the patient was liable to do himself or herself damage?"

"Not a wide experience. I have known cases with children. They have often been due to quite simple causes, and have been completely cured once the cause was removed."

"But with adults?"

"I have had personal experience of only one case, and that by no means a serious one. But I have heard of cases, apparently well authenticated. There was an American actress who fell from the window of a hotel bedroom, sustaining fatal injuries. There was no suggestion of suicide, or any ordinary accident, and the lady was known to be subject to nightmares. I believe, however, she was addicted to drugs."

"I have also heard of a man in London who crashed through a closed window in his sleep, and woke up clinging to a narrow ledge outside. He called for help and was rescued, and escaped serious hurt. Apparently he had been passing through a period of severe mental strain, owing to the dangerous and painful illness of a near relative."

"Is it your considered opinion that this case was similar—that the deceased, running away from a peril imagined in her sleep, fell through the open window and so sustained the injuries you described?"

"This is a very painful and very unusual case."

"It is the only possibility I can conceive."

"Thank you, Dr. Arkwright."

The coroner allowed himself a few minutes silence, turning over his papers in a concentrated way. There was a little stir of relaxation when he looked up suddenly, like a schoolmaster expecting to catch the class misbehaving, and began to speak.

"This is a very painful and a very unusual case. . . . About the immediate cause of death there is no doubt. This unfortunate lady fell from a third floor window onto a courtyard of concrete paving, sustaining multiple injuries, including a fractured skull, which seems to have produced unconsciousness and death within a few minutes."

Lefty Gomez Combines With Infielder To Defeat Terry's Team

FINAL SCORE 4 TO 2
Yanks Get $5,836, Losers' Share $3,891

BY GEORGE KIRKSEY
NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—(UP)—Age before beauty, they always say, so today Tony Lazzeri, a homely, wrinkled hombre of 34 years, emerged as the hero of the 1937 World Series.

He led the New York Yankees to the baseball championship over the New York Giants—led them to their sixth world title, more than any other club has ever won. He led them with his hitting, his fielding, and his dashing play that stood out in every game.

"Poosh 'em up Tony" is at his best around second base and at the plate when the blue chips are on the line and the ball game's on the fire, and he stood on the peaks today, one of the most glamorous and valuable players of all time.

Pool Third Largest
Lazzeri and his teammates collected approximately $5,836 apiece for winning their second straight "subway" series, while the Giants pool of $417,305.97, was based on the receipts for the first four games, was the third largest in series history.

The 238,146 fans who watched the five-game series saw the Yanks walk away with the first three contests by scores of 8-1, 9-1 and 5-1, only to be stopped dead in the fourth Saturday by Carl Hubbell, veteran Giants' southpaw, who pitched his mates to a 7-3 victory.

Lefty Gomez, the goofy one, who has never lost a series game, fired his Sunday pitch past the Giants to win the final game, 4-2, before 38,216 on a bleak, chilly day. The Giants rapped Gomez for 10 hits, but they could not score in the clutch. The only way they ever got a man around was when Mel Ott hit the only Giants' homer of the series with Dick Bartell on base in the third inning to tie the score.

That was only drama for Gomez. Fidgeting out there on the muddy hill (it rained all night before), he never for one minute looked like he was afraid of any of the Giants. When an airplane flew overhead, he gazed up at it. When Johnny (Grand-ma) Murphy, Yanks' money-in-the-bank relief pitcher, started warming up in the bullpen, Gomez looked way out there and chuckled. When arguments raged about a catcher's (Continued on Page Eight)

SCHMIDT'S NEED FOR GOOD KICKER PROVED BY LOSS

GRAND CANYON, Colo., Oct. 11.—(UP)—While Ohio State football players looked with amazement at natural wonders of the West during a sight-seeing tour here today, Francis A. Schmidt, the Bucks' gloomy coach, sat despondently and longed for an accurate place kicker.

The Bucks had their hopes for the mythical national championship crushed Saturday when they fell before the University of Southern California at Los Angeles by a 13 to 12 count.

If the Bucks had been trounced decisively the defeat couldn't have been as bitter for Schmidt as the one-point setback. It marked the third time since he took over the coaching reins at Ohio State in 1934 that the Scarlet team has engaged in a contest decided by a single point and the Bucks have lost all of them.

In Schmidt's first season at Ohio State, Illinois downed the Bucks 14 to 13 and cost them an undisputed Big Ten championship. Last season Northwestern beat Ohio out of a title share by edging it by an identical count.

Ohio converted both of its points after touchdowns against Texas Christian in the opener this season, and made good on one out of two against Purdue in the second game. However, with stakes high against Southern California neither Alex Schoenbaum or Joe Aleskus could get the ball between the uprights.

While the missed conversions led directly to the Bucks' defeat, sole blame for the loss can't be traced to these failures. Ohio had repeated chances in the third and fourth periods to add to its touchdown total, but missed fire at the crucial moments.

ILLINOIS HORSES WIN HEAVYWEIGHT PULLING CONTEST

TROY, Oct. 11.—(UP)—King and Charlie, a team of horses owned by William Rhoades of Springfield, Ill., won the heavy-weight pulling contest here Sunday by moving 5800 pounds 27½ feet. Fourteen teams participated in the pulling contest which was billed "for the world's championship."

Bob and Frank, owned by H. H. Williams and Sons of Wabash, Ind., were second, pulling the weight 21 feet, 5 inches.

Queen and Jim, owned by John A. Alog of Springfield, Ind., won the lightweight championship by pulling 5300 pounds 24 feet, 7 inches. Dick and Prince, owned by Burlist Meyer of Greenfork, Ind., were second in this division.

In the horse and filling show, Harry Roach of Sidney, O., won grand champion honors with his horse and Emory Routsen of Pleasant Hill, O., had the grand champion filly.

About This And That In Many Sports

Title Bubble Burst

The championship bubble that was Ohio State's is burst, definitely : : Not touted at all prior to the start of the grid season the Bucks gained some prestige when they trampled Texas Christian university : : Then they had an easy time of the Purdue Boilermakers : : And then came that long trip to Los Angeles and a defeat at the hands of the Southern California team by a single point : : One placement after touchdown would have tied the ball game, and two would have won it : : Had the Bucks taken the Trojans and gone through the remainder of the schedule without a hitch, it is hardly probable that they would have been chosen national titlists : : It must be remembered that Ohio is not playing Pittsburgh, or Minnesota, or Nebraska, or Cornell, or any one of several outstanding schools : : The Southern California defeat does not reduce the Buckeye chances for a Big Ten crown, in fact, it might help the Ohioans waken to the fact that they must play ball. ***

Many Games Close

Did you ever hear of so many one-touchdown victories as there were Saturday : : Purdue, Minnesota, Pittsburgh, Northwestern, Western Reserve knocked off their opponents by a single score. ***

15 Right, Four Wrong

Ye janitor had a pretty good day Saturday in picking 15 winners out of 19 guesses : : The losers were, of course, Ohio State and Southern California; Michigan State and Manhattan, the New Yorkers winning with a 3-0 score; N. Y. U. and North Carolina, the southerners knocking off the victory, 19-6, and Wittenberg and Denison, the Granville team winning. * * * Correct were Baldwin Wallace over John Carroll, Harvard over Brown, Purdue over Carnegie Tech, Case over Wooster, Wisconsin over Chicago, Dayton over Cincinnati, Cornell over Princeton, Pitt over Duquesne, Minnesota over Indiana, Nebraska over Iowa State, Northwestern over Michigan, Western Reserve over Ohio U., Yale over Pennsylvania, Marquette over South Dakota, Navy over Virginia. * * * Notre Dame was favored over Illinois but ties are counted out. ***

CONTRACT BRIDGE

DISTRIBUTION COUNTS

FREAKISH distribution, with a splendid fit in your partner's suit, furnishes much better support sometimes than a flock of aces and kings. It is amazing to see how many otherwise bright players fail to realize this and so allow many nice games to go by default. Others neglect the important factor of the location of their few high cards, in relation to suits bid at the right or left, which could have the effect of increasing or decreasing their value.

South passed East's opening bid of 1-Club on this deal. West then bid 1-Spade, North 2-Hearts and East 3-Diamonds.

Despite the fact that East had not made even an overcall on his first turn, he really had quite a hand to aid and abet his partner's hearts. Actually he had plenty to take the contract to 4-Hearts, especially since he possessed a partner who was strong enough to overcall when both opponents were bidding despite the fact that his own partner could do nothing on the first round.

The location of the club bid by East made the honors in that suit more valuable than otherwise. His singleton in diamonds was immensely valuable in view of the fact that he had enough trumps for ruffing purposes. His heart holding was enough to make the suit more than safe for trumps, and he even had cards of genuine value in the spade suit.

South's correct bid over East's 3-Diamonds was 4-Hearts, but all he did was sneak in 3-Hearts. Then when West called 4-Clubs, which passed around to South, the latter did nothing about it, but let the opponents go ahead and play the hand. As he did so a nice game was lost by his side.

Auttie Fyffe, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Fyffe, died after a heart attack in the third and fourth grade classroom in Muhlenberg township school, Darbyville, at 9:25 a. m. Monday. The child was sitting at his desk when he succumbed. He was dead before medical assistance could be summoned. Auttie was a pupil of the fourth grade in the classroom of William H. McKinney. Mr. McKinney said he had just started the arithmetic lesson and was writing at the blackboard when other pupils called his attention to the child. The youth slumped from his seat. Mr. McKinney put the youth back in the seat and summoned R. F. Stebbelton, superintendent. Dr. E. A. Secoy, of Darbyville, a member of the board of education was called. Sheriff Charles Radcliff and Coroner C. E. Bowers were called and Dr. Bowers returned a verdict of heart failure. The coroner said he learned the youth was ill for a short time Sunday afternoon. He was playing with other children in Darbyville when he became suddenly ill, but quickly revived. The Fyffe family resides in a small car just north of Darbyville on the George Miller farm. There are eight other children in the family, three in school. The youth's body was removed to the C. E. Hill funeral home. Arrangements for funeral services have not been completed.

Hoodin indicated he might ask for a change of venue. If the venire of 75 is exhausted, without a jury having been selected, he said, he will argue this proves the impossibility of impaneling a jury in Hamilton county.

DUKE AND WALLY BERLIN'S GUESTS of photographers and the arrival was broadcast on the radio.

The duke and duchess had about 30 pieces of baggage, of which only two were trunks. Most of the bags were labeled "Duke of Windsor, K. G."—the K. G. for Knight of the Garter—or "Duchess of Windsor." A few bags still bore traces of the "W. W. S." for Wallis Warfield Simpson, the duchess's name before her marriage to the duke.

Greeted at Hotel

The duke and duchess, their own party and the welcoming party drove to the hotel. There, there were more shouts for "Vindor" and a couple of people tried to start, "for he's a jolly good fellow."

At their hotel, the duchess found a guest card of the American Women's Club of Berlin and a box of chocolates, the gift of Dr. Ley.

FILM EXECUTIVES SILENT ON DUKE'S PICTURE POSITION

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 11 — (UP)

— Movie producers expressed surprise today over the announcement of George Fischer, columnist for the Los Angeles Evening News, that the Duke of Windsor was to become a "world film czar" for the Hollywood studios at a $100,000 yearly salary.

All major producers withheld comment. Fischer made the announcement in a radio broadcast last night when he substituted for Walter Winchell, who was ill.

He said the information came from an "authoritative source," which he did not name. The former British king was to become a world censor and roving ambassador for the American movie industry, Fischer said, and the salary would enable him to forsake his income from the British government and give him "complete independence."

"I learned that the duke will have elaborate offices in Hollywood, but much of his time will be spent as roving ambassador . . . he probably will not live in Hollywood but I understand that agents are dickering to buy an estate in Virginia, where Edward and his wife want to live," Fischer said.

He said that Windsor would be invested with "full censorship for all Hollywood films released outside this country, but his job will not affect that of Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, who censors American films."

The duke and duchess, the former Wallis Warfield Simpson of Baltimore for whom he abdicated the British throne, were starting a tour of Germany today and were planning to visit the United States to "study working conditions" here.

interference with a hitters' bats, Lefty only laughed.

Every time the Giants threatened, Gomez slammed that fireball of his down the alley. And when things got really serious there was old Tony scampering around second base, saving the ball game.

The Giants had a man on in the fifth ready to start a rally when Lazzeri scooped up a grounder to retire to the side. They had two men on in the sixth when Lazzeri gobbled up Burgess Whitehead's grounder to end the inning. In the seventh they put two men on again, when Lazzeri smothered Ripple's roller and threw him out at first.

The run which won the title, decided the series and kept the Yanks on baseball's pinnacle was scored by Lazzeri. He swung with all his might at one of Cliff Melton's pitches in the fifth inning. He met the ball solidly and it took wings. Hank Leiber and Jimmy Ripple chased it all the way to the right field bleachers, approximately 450 feet from home plate—one of the longest drives in World Series annals.

Tony pulled up at third. Bill Terry, manager of the Giants, called the infield in on the grass to try to catch Tony at the plate. Gomez, a .300 hitter who swings like a wash woman, was up there. He hit a hot drive toward Whitehead. The ball caromed off the Giants' second basemen's glove and Lazzeri scored the winning run.
